DFS Enzymes

To Whom It May Concern,

With regards to the above-mentioned product we can inform you that:

DSM Food Specialties (DFS), as a global company, is fully committed to ensuring that all our raw materials and products are safe and in compliance with global legislations.

We are aware of legislation by the State of California called the Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986 (also known as California Proposition 65 and Prop 65) that involves a list of more than 900 chemicals known to the State to cause cancer and/or reproductive toxicity. Businesses are required to provide a “clear and reasonable” warning before knowingly and intentionally exposing a Californian to a Prop 65-listed chemical if the exposure to the average consumer of the product exceeds the established threshold (safe harbour) levels.
Prop 65 may require a warning even if the product is fully in compliance with federal food safety requirements. This regulation does not directly apply to our enzyme products, which are intended for use in food production and are not sold directly to consumers.
Nevertheless, we can confirm that:

- no chemicals on the Prop 65 list are used as ingredient in our products,
- our products fully comply with the US Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act,
- our products meet the product composition, specifications, heavy metal and microbiological limits described in the product documentation.

Because it is not possible to analyse our products for all listed substances and some safe harbour levels may be very low, it is theoretically possible that traces of certain substances are present in our product. It is our expectation that the level of any such impurity or by-product in any finished product would be virtually non-existent, based on the low concentrations at which enzymes are typically used in food production.

If any specific substance might be a concern to you, and the specific maximum level is not named in our product documentation, please contact DSM for more detailed information.

Kind regards,

DSM Food Specialties B.V.
